

THE Future

Since the debut of the Atomic era in August of 1945, much progress has been made in acquainting science and industry with the potential use of nuclear energy for the benefit of mankind. Along with this, great strides forward have been made in propulsion, aerodynamics, electronics and the like.

All of this has opened new channels of opportunity, offering an unlimited ceiling for experimentation and challenging those men and women with the pioneering spirit in science and engineering.

THE FLAME BURNS STEADY

We who can be called young—not in age alone, but also in faith and courage—face the future with confidence. Our trust in the future has been forged in the fires of our past; we have known dark moments, but we have always risen above them.

This new year of 1953, with its threshold of hope and threat, is a strange anniversary year for young Americans. It's a time in which to remember the trials that have given us our strength.

Look back for a moment. In 1923, when most of us had not yet been born, a foul monster named Hitler spewed out the germs of World War II with his Munich Beer Hall Putsch.

In 1933, on January 30, this same Hitler became Chancellor of Germany, thus opening an era of bloodshed and sacrifice. This has been a proving ground for young Americans.

No one can easily forget that 1933 was marked not only by Hitler's rise in power, but by troubles in our own land, as well—depression, unemployment, poverty, desperation.

We came through it, though.

We came through it to find ourselves, in 1943, at war with Germany and Japan. There were 15,000,000 young Americans under arms, with 7,000,000 overseas. We were doing all right, too. North Africa, Sicily, Salerno, Naples, the Volturno.

We won the war. God willing, we'll keep winning.

The editors of the K-Log can't see any reason for trembling over what lies ahead. Young Americans will regard the future as a challenge, because that's their nature. By meeting every challenge the past has hurled at them, they are prepared for tomorrow.

Let the old-in-heart whimper; let them weep for the lost 1920's, for the days of false security and the fast buck and Flaming Youth.

Today the flame burns inside, strong and steady.

Listen for the sounds of the future. Listen carefully.

You will hear no whimpering from the young.

Foreword

... For all that the future holds — still a reasonable fear of the unknown persists: A fear of war, of failure at your lifework, at love, and in society, but that minute spark of life and hope flickers and grows brighter. It holds our hopes and dreams. We wonder: What changes will take place in our world during the next years? Will it be just this planet, one of innumerable stars in the heavens, or an entire universe? Will we be at peace, or in turmoil and unrest? What will our life be like?

This annual has been designed to fit into the pattern of the times at 2000 A.D. At that time may this treasury, this store-house of past memories, recall to you every minute of these all-important four years.

We Dedicate . . .

MR. GLENN EXUM

Nineteen years of continuous service dedicated to turning out top musicians—that is his record. Under his leadership and direction, the band and choruses have won many laurels in musical contests and events.

In acknowledgement and appreciation of his work we sincerely dedicate this K-Log of '53 to a man who has won fame for Kellogg in the field of music.

MR. LARSEN, now completing his fourth year behind the principal's desk, is noted for his fair dealing with the students. He is responsible for reviving publication of the K-Log and, besides the many weighty responsibilities he carries, he still shares his time with a Latin class.

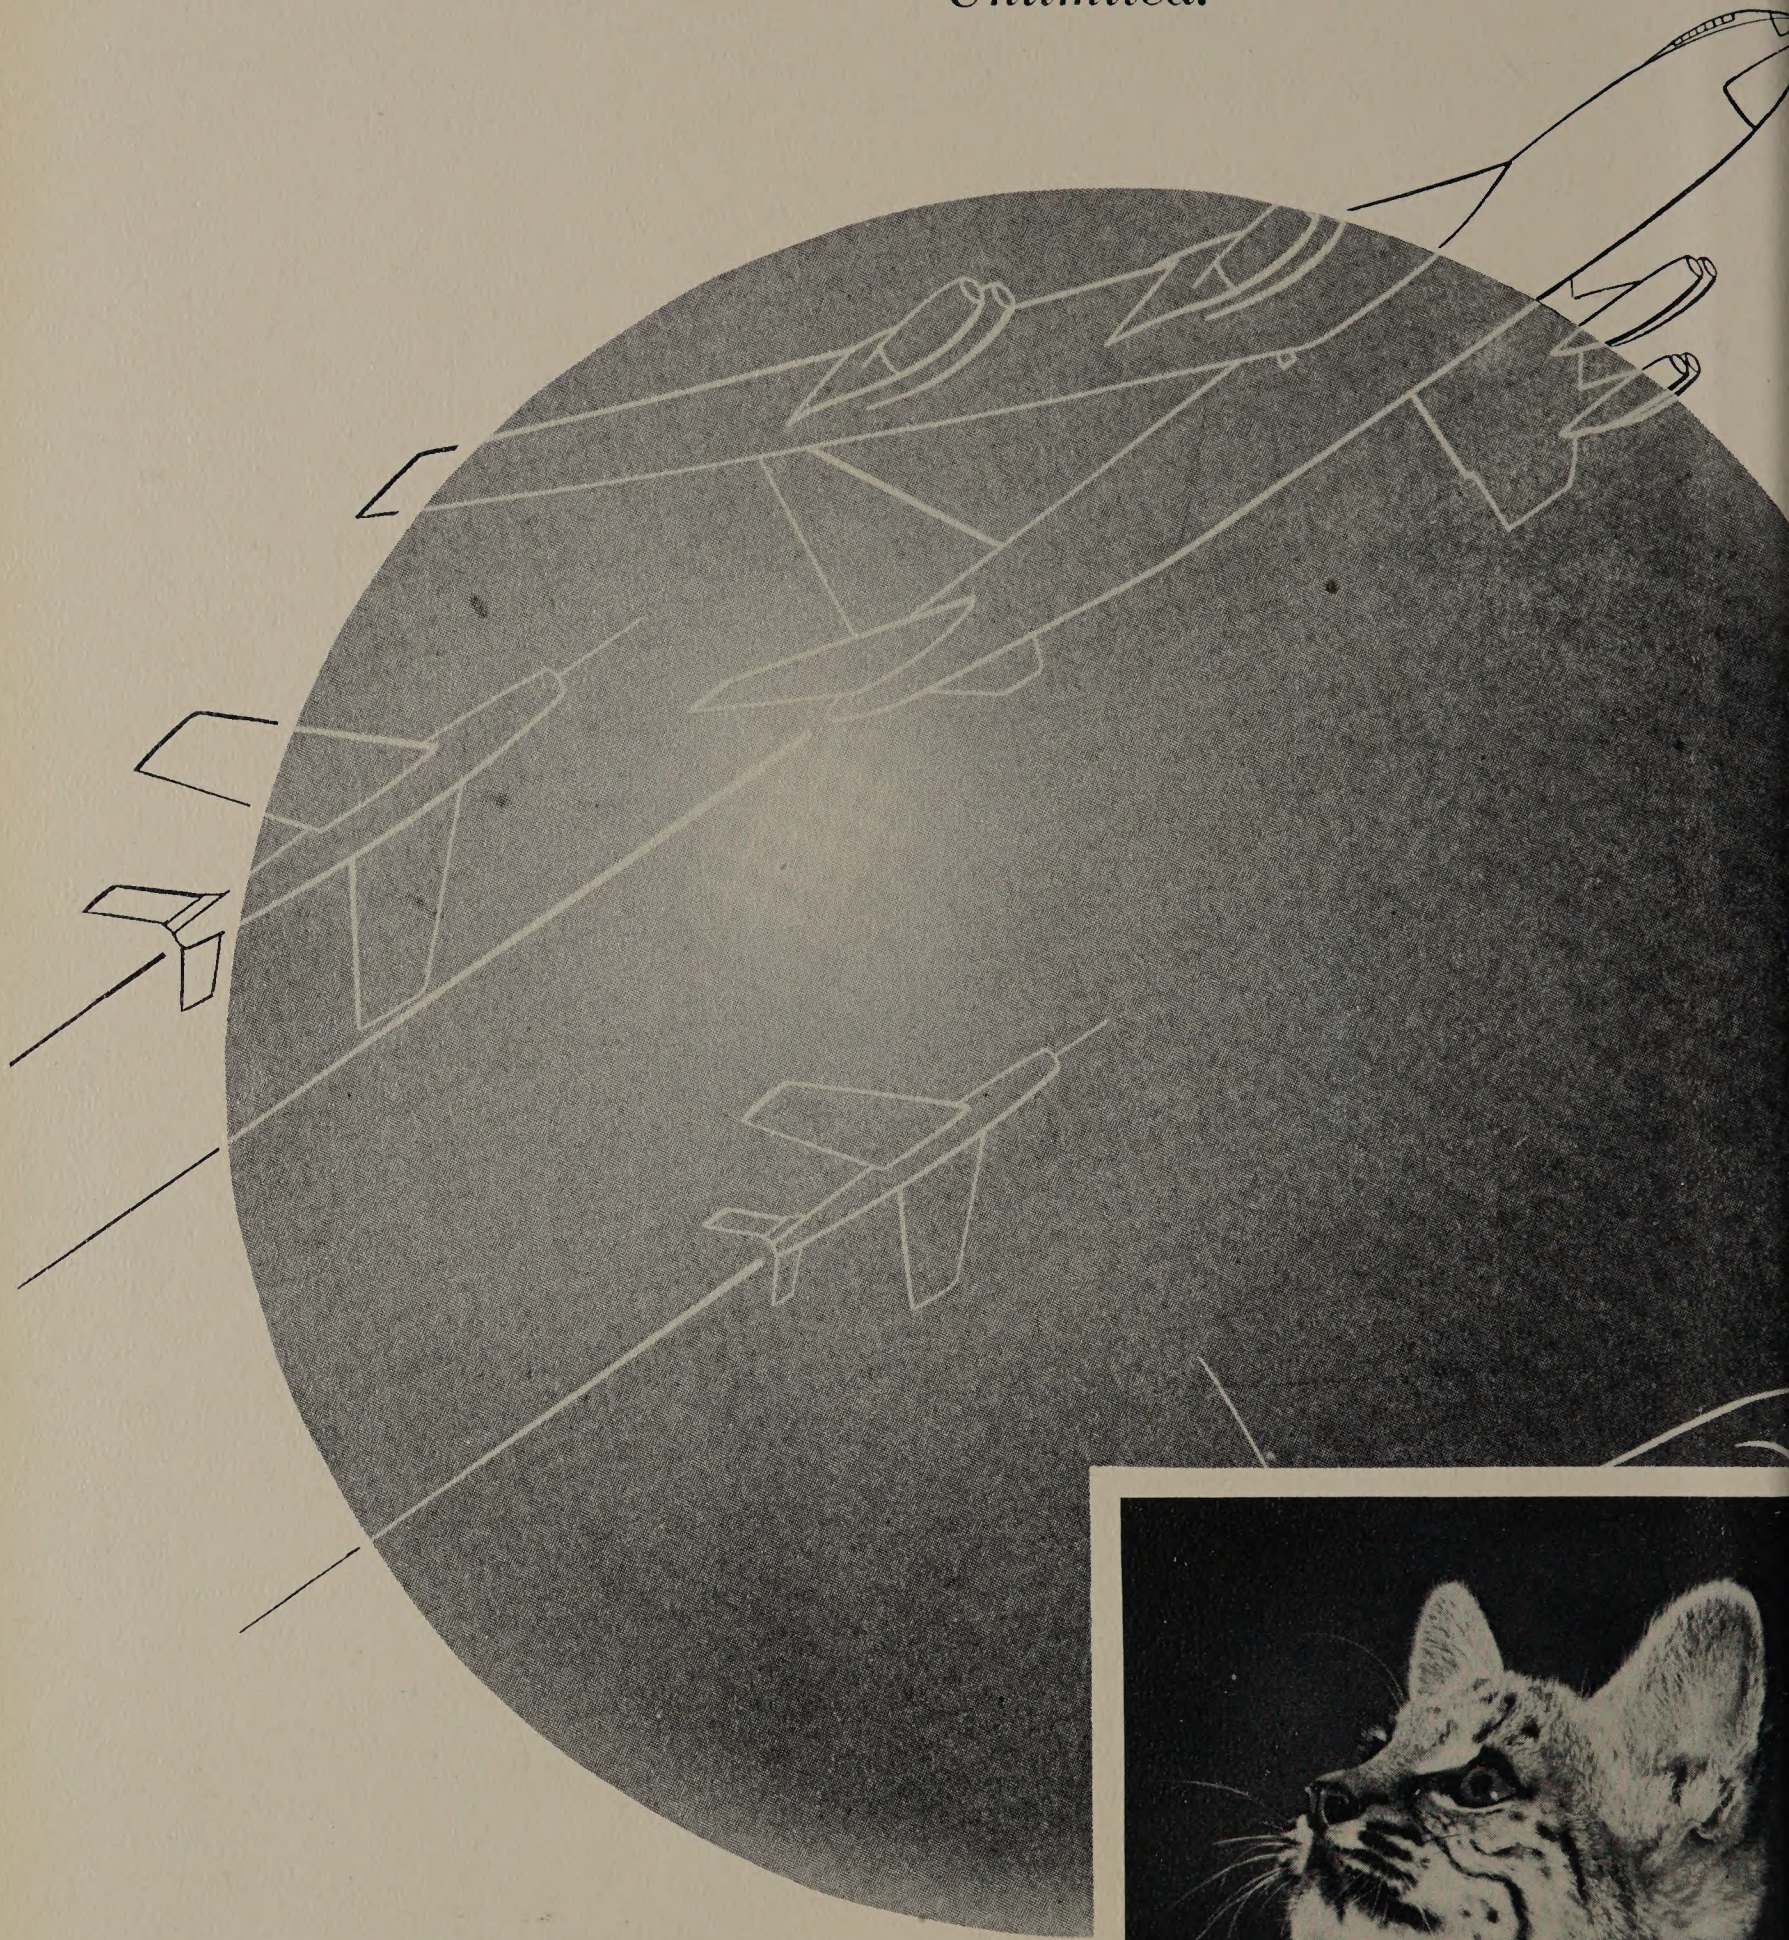

MR. ANDREWS has been an outstanding figure in education circles for many years. Superintendent of Kellogg schools since 1946, he accepted the position of superintendent of the enlarged school district after consolidation of the schools at the beginning of the year.

As a result of the school reorganization, a new school board was elected at the start of the year. Consisting of five members, the board sets and decides the overall general policies of the school and has charge of hiring all employees.

Senior Class

Closing the door forever behind twelve years of exams, textbooks, fun, and revelry, the class of '53 slowly trudges out into the world of adulthood.

SENIORS

. . . Rising up, up, up into the unknown with gathering speed and no hesitation, the class of '53 left behind a quickly disappearing trail of pleasant recollections. But they soon vanished from the eyes and thoughts of those onlookers, the other classes, and were soon swallowed up in the unknown future confronting them.

JOURNALISM DEPARTMENT

This annual and the Student Press are the result of long, tedious hours of work by the smiling faces on these two pages. By all outward appearances these two "small" projects look simple enough but, in truth, they represent nine months of the utmost efforts of twenty-one budding young journalists.

Students have become accustomed to these people racing madly about getting up to date news stories, typing copy for the annual, or looking for subjects of unusual feature stories.

SERENADERS

"The sweetest music this side of Saltese." Thus one organization described the Serenaders. Composed of six talented musicians from the K.H.S. band, these six have, entirely on their own, achieved fame in one short year, playing nearly every week-end in and around Kellogg. Their success is the result of constant practice, of buying music, and of sacrificing the joys of dancing.

JUNIORS

. . . With each in line, and poised for action, the junior class had an unusually active year. Among their successful missions were the selling of lucky charms, concessions at basketball games, and many dances. They too, are waiting their turn to leave home base and soar into the unknown; though some may never return again to that home base.

SENIOR BALL

Beneath the gay colorful ceiling of balloons, confetti, and crepe paper, couples cavort and enjoy themselves at the Mardi Gras, the Senior Class' annual extravaganza. Others surround the punchbowl where girls in harlequin costumes please thirsty customers.

SOPHOMORES

. . . Opening the school year with a "bang", the class of '55 exploded over the land, scattering members into the far corners of the school, particularly on the football field and in the "brains" department. Some settled to the bottom while others, like President Mark Nathan, rose to the top.

THE Future

Since the debut of the Atomic era in August of 1945, much progress has been made in acquainting science and industry with the potential use of nuclear energy for the benefit of mankind. Along with this, great strides forward have been made in propulsion, aerodynamics, electronics and the like.

All of this has opened new channels of opportunity, offering an unlimited ceiling for experimentation and challenging those men and women with the pioneering spirit in science and engineering.

THE FLAME BURNS STEADY

We who can be called young—not in age alone, but also in faith and courage—face the future with confidence. Our trust in the future has been forged in the fires of our past; we have known dark moments, but we have always risen above them.

This new year of 1953, with its threshold of hope and threat, is a strange anniversary year for young Americans. It's a time in which to remember the trials that have given us our strength.

Look back for a moment. In 1923, when most of us had not yet been born, a foul monster named Hitler spewed out the germs of World War II with his Munich Beer Hall Putsch.

In 1933, on January 30, this same Hitler became Chancellor of Germany, thus opening an era of bloodshed and sacrifice. This has been a proving ground for young Americans.

No one can easily forget that 1933 was marked not only by Hitler's rise in power, but by troubles in our own land, as well—depression, unemployment, poverty, desperation.

We came through it, though.

We came through it to find ourselves, in 1943, at war with Germany and Japan. There were 15,000,000 young Americans under arms, with 7,000,000 overseas. We were doing all right, too. North Africa, Sicily, Salerno, Naples, the Volturno.

We won the war. God willing, we'll keep winning.

The editors of the K-Log can't see any reason for trembling over what lies ahead. Young Americans will regard the future as a challenge, because that's their nature. By meeting every challenge the past has hurled at them, they are prepared for tomorrow.

Let the old-in-heart whimper; let them weep for the lost 1920's, for the days of false security and the fast buck and Flaming Youth.

Today the flame burns inside, strong and steady.

Listen for the sounds of the future. Listen carefully.

You will hear no whimpering from the young.
